In one of the forgotten experiments of the 1950s, scientists bombarded plants with radiation to force new mutations, an unpredictable process known as Atomic Gardening. Most attempts failed. But every once in a while a desirable variation could be cultivated further.

In the same vein, Atomic Fruit's music is always mutating, evolving.

With members from Sweden, France and Italy, the group formed in 2021 after a serendipitous meeting at a SUUNS concert. With their first show only two weeks later, the band quickly became a fixture of the Berlin underground scene with their genre defying, high intensity live sets.

Atomic Fruit combines dreamy psychedelic rock with electronic beats and exploratory songwriting. Drawing on analog synthesizers and guitar pedal tap dancing, their sound moves between trip hop, jungle, and desert rock.

"The attention to sonic nuances and genre-bending character of the songs, along with beautifully structured melodies will definitely appeal to fans of "alt-j" and "Radiohead". However, the band's approach to songwriting itself is unique and escapes easy comparisons." - Loudness Blog

Formed as a four-piece, the band introduced their eclectic mix of synths, trumpet, samples, and fractured rhythms to an international audience with their debut vinyl Play Dough (2023), earning both radio and playlists placements.

With Sketches of the Moon (2025), the band turned inward: slower, more introspective and with a sound design steeped in the cinematic unease of David Lynch.

Following its release, the band saw the departure of a founding member, as the remaining trio solidified and toured restlessly across Europe, performing in Germany, Czech Republic, Austria, France, Sweden, Italy and Denmark.

Atomic Fruit's upcoming 3rd album Serpentine is set to be released in October 2026 and will map the band's evolution fully grown into itself: genre-bending soundscapes, new rhythms, and new mutations. 100% safe for human consumption.
